Request for file-review processing

As per the Instructions Governing the Streaming of Less Complex Claims at the Refugee Protection Division, the Immigration and Refugee Board (IRB) is committed to adjudicating cases simply, quickly, and fairly. In order to reach this objective, claimants and counsel can request that a claim be reviewed and considered for potential processing under the file-review process, which means that a claim may be decided pursuant to paragraph 170(f) of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act (IRPA) without a hearing. At any time prior to a decision being rendered, it can be determined by the RPD that a refugee claim will require a hearing.

The Refugee Protection Division (RPD) will not decide any claim without a hearing in the following circumstances:

- confirmation of front-end security screening has not been received;
- the Minister has filed a Notice of Intervention to intervene in person;
- a Notice has been sent under the RPD Rules notifying the Minister of a possible exclusion, inadmissibility or integrity issue;
- there are issues related to the claimant's identity which require further examination;
- there are serious credibility issues that arise from the documents in the file;
- the claim is inconsistent with country information; or
- there are complex legal or factual issues that require a hearing to resolve.

For a claim to be included into the file-review process, you must provide a reason below, which must include explanation on how the personal or documentary evidence and personal profile of the claimant(s) justify a decision without a hearing.

Please note that if your claim is processed through the file-review process, it does not mean that it will be finalized sooner.

This form should be sent to the RPD through one of the methods as noted in the Practice Notice.

If your request is allowed, the claimant(s) will receive a letter with further instructions, which will also serve as a notification to the Minister that this refugee claim might be processed by the Task Force on Less Complex Claims (TFLCC) under the file-review process.

If your request is not allowed, the claimant(s) will receive a decision with reasons.

For any general suggestion of countries and claim type that could be generally suitable for the file-review process that do not concern individual refugee claims, please submit your suggestions to Policy-Politiques@irb-cisr.gc.ca and include information on the name of the country, specific claim type (profile), as well as up-to-date documentary evidence from different objective sources if the information is not on the RPD's National Documentation Packages (website reference links will not be reviewed, documentary evidence must be attached).
